the great point of sale behind the download of movies is convenience. you do not need to enter a car, stay online or spend several days waiting as your dvds travel back and forth between your home and a shipping center. but choosing a service that does not meet your needs can make the process pale compared to other methods of purchase and rental. the first thing to keep in mind is the platform that the site requires. Most movie sites require windows xp. some will also work with windows view or windows 2000. only the iTunes music store supports the macintosh operating system, and none of the major sites currently support linux. most sites also require internet explorer and windows media player. even if you can view most sites in firefox, the movielink site will only work with internet explorer with enabled activex control. amazon unbox requires microsoft. net picture, and clam requires a proprietary application. for many users, the next big deal-breaker is the site selection. download sites get their films from film studios, which own digital rights for movies. a site can not offer the film without first negotiating an agreement with the studio. some sites, such as movielink, have agreements with many major studios, so they have a wide selection of mainstream movies. Others, such as guba, have a selection of free films, independent, as well as studio ocites that you can rent for a fee. vongo is the property of starz entertainment, and its selection reflects only what starz has the right to transmit. when you find a site with a selection of movies you like, the next thing to watch is the quality of movies. There are a couple of measures to keep in mind. One is the resolution, which is measured in pixels. The greater the resolution, the better the image quality. For example,in the video download store of Wal-Mart have a resolution of 640 x 480 pixels, which is the same as the lowest standard television resolution. Wal-Mart also offers a scaled versionportable media players with a resolution of 320 x 240 pixels. You can also measure bitrate quality, often measured in bits per second (bps). The higher the bitrate, the better the quality -- bitrate DVD is about 5 kb per second (kbps), or 5000 bps. The codec, or program that encodes and decodes digital video, can also significantly affect the quality of the video. However, sites do not always specify which codecs they use. Finally, before buying or renting movies online, you should carefully read the terms of use of the site and familiarize yourself with its DRM. Some sites are relatively flexible. You can play movies on multiple machines, download them to portable media players and also burn them on DVD. Other sites offer much less options - for example, Amazon Unbox received criticism shortly after its launch for the perceived inflexibility of its terms of use. Several sites allow you to make a backup disk that will only be used on your computer originally to download the file. For sites using streaming media, you never have a copy of the movie, just look at it as it flows. Once you find a site that meets your criteria for the platform, selection, quality and terms of use, some simple questions can help you make your final choice: How much are the movies? Are they almost expensive as DVDs? If so, do you prefer to find a cheaper alternative or stay with high quality DVD? Rental and purchase options match what you are looking for? If the site offers a subscription program, do you have enough movies that interest you to make it useful? Are movies compatible with any portable device you want to use to watch them? Several sites ensure that their files will reproduce on any Microsoft PlaysForSure compatible device, but others have a more limited compatibility. The sitea file format with which you had good or bad experiences in the past? Do you need a proprietary download manager or a player? If so, so,mind download and learn to use them, or do you prefer to use programs that you are already familiar with? The player has all the features you want - can you pause, back and fast forward? To see a comparison of some site offers, check these articles from TechCrunch and ExtremeTech. Next, we will take a look at the movie download services that are available now. By Liz Jacobs Mozilla Firefox is a web browser similar to Internet Explorer or Google Chrome. The browser is part of the Mozilla Application Suite. Firefox makes downloading simple movies because once downloaded, a window opens that allows you to immediately access the download. Downloading a movie in Firefox is very similar to downloading a movie in any other browser. However, the download window looks different because Firefox has its own unique browser interface.
